

Ocean Protection Council awards $6 million to marine science research projects

California Sea Grant will administer 12 of the 24 projects that address sustainable fisheries, aquaculture, and changing ocean conditions.

Read More

Could fish sounds help scientists monitor ocean health?

The ballad of the bocaccio 🎵

The hum of the plain midshipman 🎵

The sounds of the kelp forest are vibrant and full of mystery.

Struggling Olympia oysters get a boost from scientists

Raising oysters in the lab is finicky business, but researchers used aquaculture to restore native oysters in Monterey Bay.

Keep Reading

NOAA awards $500k to support sustainable aquaculture research

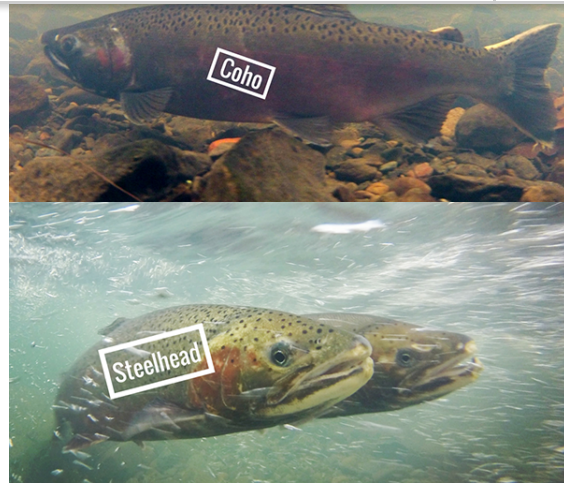

California Sea Grant has been awarded two new grants to address impediments to aquaculture opportunities.

Keep Reading

Do you
#knowyourcoho?

is a critical skill for anyone fishing waters where these species coexist.

Keep Reading

Latest from the blog

Who we're hearing from this month: Delta Science Fellow Julie Hopper is in search of a superhero to control an invasive species • Erik Martinez helps to develop the Coastal Commission's first draft environmental justice policy • Jaclyn Mandoske says collaboration is key to adapt to rising tides • Stephanie Gad gives advice to incoming State Fellows

Events

- What is California Sea Grant?

Friday, January 18 at Scripps Institution of Oceanography

🐟 Sharing is how we grow, please forward to friends interested in marine and coastal science. 🐟

Copyright © 2019 California Sea Grant, All rights reserved.

Want to change how you receive these emails?
You can update your preferences or unsubscribe from this list.

